

HR Advisor

We are looking to recruit an experienced HR Advisor who will report to the soon to be appointed HR Manager and support the team to deliver a full range of HR services to managers and employees alike.

This is a generalist role with a broad remit within a dedicated business area. You will be responsible for recruitment and selection, coaching and guiding managers in employee relations matters and, in time, delivering HR-related training and development on occasions. Alongside this, you'll have every opportunity to have your say and be involved in shaping the improvement of HR process and practice across the whole organisation; helping to put the WOW factor in to every aspect of the employee experience so that our employees are driven to be the best they can be.

Naturally, you'll hold an HR qualification or equivalent, but just as importantly, you'll love all things HR and have the energy and passion to get things done in collaboration with others. Although travel is limited, you will have the capacity to travel to locations within the Kent and Sussex area when required.

We are embarking on an exciting journey and are in the process of growing and transforming the HR function in to one that truly advocates placing 'people' at the heart of the business.

Do you want to help create a positive legacy?

Yes? Then apply today with your current CV, covering letter and take your first step to joining a warm, supportive team that is intent on making a real difference.
